“ Bob was always good for a laugh.

When Larry and I were traveling with Bob and Whynama in Costa Rica or Puerto Rico, we took a boat ride in the rain forest. Before getting on the boat, Bob purchased a black hat from a vendor in the parking lot. Shortly after getting on the boat, it began to pour. Bob and Whynama were sitting in the row in front of us, and Bob turned around looking miserable, with rain pouring down his face. I started laughing and told him he had black dye running down his face. The look on his face was priceless! I told him I was just kidding, and we had a good laugh knowing no matter how bad things are, they can be worse; and it was just rainwater.

While in Puerto Rico or Costa Rica, Bob came to our hotel room door wearing loud pink, red, and white shorts and a matching top. I told him I thought he was going to town. He said, "We are." I asked him why he was wearing his pajamas. He politely informed me they were not pajamas, and he had a blue outfit just like the red outfit. One of the outfits even had a pair of matching shoes. Bob, Whynama, Barbara, and Russ went on a bus to town. When they returned, Bob kept repeating "school kids are vicious." He was quite pleased to report many people asked to have their pictures taken with him.

Bob and Whynama are dearly missed.
